"About the authors." Government Communication: Cases and challenges. Ed. Karen Sanders and María José Canel. New York: Bloomsbury Academic, 2013. 313–318. Bloomsbury Collections. Web. 26 Apr. 2023. <<http://dx.doi.org/10.5040/9781472544629.0004>>.

Downloaded from Bloomsbury Collections, www.bloomsburycollections.com, 26 April 2023, 14:38 UTC.

Copyright © Karen Sanders, María José Canel and Contributors 2013. Released under a CC BY-NC-ND licence (<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/3.0/>). You may share this work for non-commercial purposes only, provided you give attribution to the copyright holder and the publisher, and provide a link to the Creative Commons licence.

About the authors

Rubén Aguilar Valenzuela (1947) holds a Ph.D. in Social Science. He is a founding partner at Afan Consultores Internacionales, SC and professor of the departments of Communications and Social and Political Sciences at Universidad Iberoamericana. He writes twice a week for El Economista newspaper (Mexico City) and to over 20 dailies across the country, among them El Imparcial (Hemosillo, Sonora) and Frontera (Tijuana, Baja California). He also contributes monthly for Etcétera magazine (Mexico City). During the civil war in El Salvador he founded and directed Salpress, the news agency of the Frente Farabundo Martí para la Liberación Nacional (FMLN). During the government of President Vicente Fox (2000–6), Mr Aguilar was coordinator of the presidency's Private Secretariat (2002–4), Press coordinator and government spokesperson (2004–6). His most recent books are Los saldos del narco: El fracaso de una guerra, with Jorge G. Castañeda, and La sociedad civil en México (2012).

Marcin Anaszewicz is a political scientist (University of Warsaw). He graduated with a Ph.D. from the Faculty of Journalism and Political Sciences of the University of Warsaw, and postgraduate studies in Collegium of Business Administration of the Warsaw School of Economics. Since 1996 he has been working to increase civic participation and social dialogue. His research interests include public relations, public affairs and political marketing. Currently his main field of research is the legal basis, framework and instruments of public and political communication in Poland.

María José Canel is professor of Political Communication at the University Complutense of Madrid (Spain), chair of the Political Communication division of ECREA and co-chair of IAMCR and member of the advisory board of the Journal of Communication and of the International Encyclopedia of Communication. She has published nationally and internationally on government communication and related matters: Morality Tales: Political Scandals in Britain and Spain in the 1990s (Hampton Press, 2006) (co-authored); Comunicación de las instituciones públicas [Communicating public institutions] (Tecnos, 2007). She has also published articles in the journals of Local Government Studies, Journal of Political Communication, European Journal of Communication, Journalism. Theory, Practice and Criticism, International Journal of Press and Politics and Public Relations Review. She was chief of the Minister's Cabinet at the Ministry for Education, Culture and Sport and has practical experience in communication in the public sector.

Judy Chia-Wen Chang is a communications specialist whose focus is on creating visions for brands and crafting messages that will successfully drive business objectives. She is now a strategic planner at a 4A advertising agency in China, working with some of the world's biggest multinational companies. Ms Chang graduated with a bachelor's degree in Psychology from University of British Columbia and a master's degree in financial journalism from Tsinghua University in 2010.

Bogusława Dobek-Ostrowska is professor of communication and chair of the Department of Communication and Journalism at the University of Wrocław, Poland. She is the founder and the president of the Polish Communication Association. She is the editor of Central European Journal of Communication and Serie Communication and Media published by the University of Wrocław Press. She is the author of several books and articles. Her research interests focus on political communication, comparative media system and transformation of media systems in Central and Eastern Europe and journalism studies. She is a participant in many international projects. She is a member of the Editorial Board of Communication Theory – a journal of the International Communication Association.

Steven Guanpeng Dong is the director of the Institute of Public Relations and Strategic Communications, Tsinghua University. Dr Dong is also the founder and director of Global Journalism Institute (GJI), a joint programme of Tsinghua University and Thomson Reuters. Dr Dong holds professorships of political communications at the State Council National School of Administration and the Chinese Communist Party's Central Academy of Socialism. Since 2001, he is among the first scholars in China who lectures on political communications for Chinese high-ranked politicians and leaders of state owned enterprises. Dr Dong has been invited by the State Council Offices over the years to lecture to more than 20,000 senior Chinese officials and is a member of the advisory committee for publicity and crisis communications for varied offices of the State Council of China since the SARS outbreak in 2003. Previously, Dr Dong was a news presenter of political and current affairs programmes on China Central Television (CCTV). Dr Dong holds LLB in Diplomatic Studies and Foreign Affairs Administration from Peking University, MA in Political Communications from the University of Sheffield, M.Phil. in Development Studies from the University of Cambridge and Ph.D. in East Asian Studies from the University of Durham.

Kajsa Falasca is a doctoral candidate in Media and Communication Studies at Mid Sweden University, Sundsvall, Sweden. She is currently working on her dissertation project on Communication during the Financial Crisis. Her research interest includes political communication, political news journalism and news media effects.

Christina Holtz-Bacha is professor of communications at the School of Economics, University of Erlangen-Nürnberg, Germany. She studied communications, political science and sociology. She received her Ph.D. at the University of Münster and her postdoctoral dissertation (Habilitation) in Hanover. Prior to her current position she has taught at the universities of Munich, Bochum and Mainz. In 1986, she was a visiting scholar at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. In 1999, she was a research fellow at the Shorenstein Center, Harvard University. In 2011, she was a guest researcher at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden. She is a co-editor of the German journal Publizistik and a member of the editorial boards of several international journals. She has been the associate editor (Europe) for ICA's Communication Yearbook from 2008 to 2011. Her main research interests are in political communication, media systems and (European) media policy.

Terence Lee Ph.D. is associate professor in Communication and Media Studies and academic chair of the postgraduate Communication Management program at Murdoch University, Australia. He is also a research fellow of the Asia Research Centre at Murdoch University. He publishes widely on various aspects of media, culture and politics in Singapore, Malaysia and the broader Asia-Pacific region. He is the author of The Media, Cultural Control and Government in Singapore (Routledge, 2010/2012) and co-editor of Voting in Change: Politics of Singapore's 2011 General Election (with Kevin YL Tan; Ethos Books, Singapore, 2011) and Political Regimes and the Media in Asia (with Krishna Sen, Routledge, 2008).

Abbey Blake Levenshus (Ph.D., University of Maryland) is an assistant professor in the University of Tennessee's School of Advertising and Public Relations. She teaches and researches about organizational public relations, specializing in government public relations, risk and crisis communication, and social media. Her research has been published in books and top communication journals like Journal of Applied Communication Research and the Journal of Public Relations Research. Levenshus's professional experience includes serving as communication director for a US Congressman, a political technology company and a government consulting firm in Washington, DC.

Brooke Fisher Liu is associate professor in the Department of Communication at the University of Maryland and a research affiliate with the National Consortium for the Study of Terrorism and Responses to Terrorism (START). Her research primarily examines how government organizations manage communication during crisis and non-crisis situations with a special emphasis on new technology. Dr Liu's research has been published in outlets such Communication Research, Journal of Applied Communication Research, Journal of Communication Management and Journal of Public Relations Research. She received her Ph.D. in mass communication from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (2006) and MA in journalism from the University of Missouri – Columbia (2003).

Philippe J. Maarek is professor of Political Communication at the University Paris East, co-founder of its Communication Department and Director of the Center for Comparative Studies in Political and Public Communication. He has chaired the Research Committees of the International Political Science Association (IPSA), and the similar section of the International Association for Media and Communication Research (IAMCR). His books include Campaign Communication and Political Marketing (Wiley-Blackwell, 2011), also published and re-edited in French and Spanish. He serves on the editorial boards of the European Journal of Communication Research, the Journal of Press/Politics, the European Journal of Communication, Comunicazione Politica, the Central European Journal of Communication, the Keio Communication Review. He is a listed expert for the Research Funds of Belgium and Germany and has been a guest professor in many Universities (Brême, Mainz, Complutense in Madrid, Navarra, Montreal, Concordia of Montreal, etc.). He has been awarded the prestigious French Legion d'Honneur.

Percy Makombe works for the Open Society Initiative for Southern Africa (OSISA) as a programme officer. Prior to joining OSISA he was the programmes manager for the Cape Town-based Economic Justice Network. Holding an MA in Globalisation and Communication from the Centre for Mass Communication Research at the University of Leicester, Percy has also worked as deputy director for the Southern and Eastern African Trade Information Negotiations Institute (SEATINI). His experience also extends to the media where he has worked as chief subeditor for the business and political weekly Zimbabwe Independent and editor for another Zimbabwe monthly magazine Moto. Percy's policy and advocacy experience is local, regional and international. He has also worked for the University of Aberdeen as a Dissemination and Communications Officer in their Initiative for Maternal Mortality Programme Assessment.

Nkanyiso Maqeda is a deputy director of an independent research institute, which is dedicated to consensus building among key political and civil society players in Zimbabwe. A holder of an MA in Political Communications from the University of Sheffield and an MA in Communications and Media Studies from the University of Zimbabwe, Maqeda boasts over 15 years working as journalist, media researcher and communications director for various organizations in Zimbabwe.

Yolanda Meyenberg Leycegui is full time senior researcher at the Institute of Social Research of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). She was responsible for the Political Speeches Area and for the Spokesman of the President Office during the presidency of Vicente Fox (2001–6). She is the academic coordinator of the Diploma in Political Communication of the Social Research Institute of Social (UNAM). Her recent books as co-author are Palabra y poder. Manual del discurso político [Word and Power. Manual of Political Speech] (Grijalbo, 2011) and ¿Qué dicen los candidatos?. Análisis del discurso en campaña [What Do the Candidates Say? Analysing Campaign Speeches] (SamSara, 2012). She has been advisor to the Mexican Deputy Chamber, of the Federal Electoral Institute (IFE), of the Technical Secretary of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and of the Electoral Area for Latin America of the United Nations (UNDP).

Lars Nord is professor and chair of Political Communication at Mid Sweden University, Sundsvall, Sweden. He is also director of the Centre for Study of Democracy and Communication at Mid Sweden University. His research interests include political journalism, media policy and strategic political communication.

Lina Yoon Park is a freelance journalist based in Beijing, where she moved to cover the 2008 Beijing Olympics. Lina started her career in journalism after graduating from Yonsei University in 2004 with a double degree in Mass Communication and Political Science and Diplomacy. She worked for the Far Eastern Economic Review and the Wall Street Journal in Seoul, before becoming a freelancer in 2007. In Beijing, she also studied a master's program on Global Business Journalism at Tsinghua University. Lina has written for the Wall Street Journal, Time and LA Times, and produced pieces for CBS News and CNN. Born into a Korean family in Spain, Lina has a special interest in the crossover between Eastern and Western culture. She speaks fluent Spanish, Korean, English, Catalan and intermediate Mandarin Chinese and French.

Karen Sanders is professor of Communication in the Faculty of Humanities and Communication Sciences of CEU San Pablo University, where she directs the Department of Advertising and Institutional Communication, and visiting professor at IESE Business School. Karen worked at the University of Sheffield until 2006. President of the Association of Political Communication (Asociación de Comunicación Política – ACOP), Karen is a specialist in political communication and ethics and journalism. She is the author of Ethics and Journalism (Sage, 2003) and Communicating Politics in the 21st Century (Palgrave Macmillan, 2009) as well as numerous articles, essays and papers in publications such as European Journal of Communication, Journal of Journalism Studies, Handbook of Crisis Communication (Blackwell, 2009) and Political Public Relations (Routledge, 2011). She is also the director of the Research Centre of Communication Trends of CEU San Pablo University.

Holli A. Semetko, Ph.D., is Asa Griggs Candler Professor of Media and International Affairs in the Department of Political Science at Emory University where she served for nearly a decade as Vice Provost for International Affairs and Director of the Halle Institute for Global Learning. She has recently edited The Sage Handbook of Political Communication. She was chair and professor of Audience and Public Opinion Research at the University of Amsterdam and served as founding board chair of the Amsterdam School of Communications Research (ASCoR) before moving to Emory in Atlanta in 2003.

Rodrigo Uribe is assistant professor in Marketing Communications at the Department of Business, University of Chile. In addition, he has been the main advisor to the director of communication of the Chilean government (2006–10) and marketing advisor in communication strategy and market research in the private sector. He received his BA in Psychology from the Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile, MA in Political Communication and Ph.D. in Mass Communication from the University of Sheffield, UK. His current research interests include PR strategies, persuasive tactics, children and advertising, audience behaviour and product placement. His papers have been published in several international journals such as the Journal of Business Research, International Marketing Review, International Journal of Advertising, Harvard Business Review (Latinamerican version) and Innovar.

Tarun Wadhwa is a researcher and writer studying the intersection between technology and public policy. He is a researcher at Hybrid Reality Institute and research fellow at Singularity University. He is also on the Transparency and Privacy, and Cybercrime/Malware Advisory Boards for the Lifeboat Foundation. He is a contributor to Forbes, Huffington Post and his articles have appeared in several major media outlets. His forthcoming book explores the impact of the global rise of digital identification systems around the world.

Sally Young is associate professor and reader of Political Science in the School of Social and Political Sciences at the University of Melbourne. She is the author of many essays and articles on government advertising and the editor of Government Communication in Australia (Cambridge University Press, 2007). Her latest book is How Australia Decides: Election Reporting and the Media (Cambridge University Press, 2011).